MARK ELLIOTT NAMED DIRECTOR OF BASKETBALL OPERATIONS

FRANKLIN, Tenn. – Former Vanderbilt basketball and baseball player Mark Elliott has joined A-Game as director of basketball operations.

Prior to joining A-Game, Elliott most recently served in sales management for Franklin-based Fitness Systems for 16 years. After graduating from Vanderbilt in 1980, he played for five years in the New York Mets minor league system. He was head basketball coach at Montgomery Bell Academy for five years and assistant basketball coach at Vanderbilt for six years. He has also led the NCC Warriors home school basketball program for seven years.

“We are pleased to have Mark on board to lead our basketball programs,” said Trigg Wilkes, A-Game general manager. “We are already attracting top basketball events, including a national AAU tournament this summer. We are confident Mark will help us continue to position A-Game as ‘the’ place to host great basketball events while also building Middle Tennessee’s finest development program.”

In his new position, Elliott will oversee all of A-Game’s basketball operations. This includes coordination of local, regional and national tournaments, as well as running local leagues and clinics at A-Game.

Located in Cool Springs, A-Game is a 175,000-square-foot multi-sport training and destination facility. The facility features two ice rinks, hardwood courts for basketball and volleyball, a fitness center, Laser Chase and other sports and activities. For more information, visit www.goagame.com.
